

Brian Smith writes about the allure of BC's wild rainbow trout that attracts fly fishers from all over the world. He describes in extraordinary detail the fabled Blackwater, Stellako and Crooked rivers and the still waters of the Dragon, Hobson, Hart and Wicheeda, renowned trophy lakes that produce rainbow trout weighing up to six kilograms. In this comprehensive guide, Smith shares his award-winning fly tying patterns, his favourite fly fishing techniques and his extensive knowledge of the species, and geography of the Central Interior and North Cariboo waters.

Brian Smith, as a fly fishing student of the late Jack Shaw, learned one thing well: discover for yourself what works. Brian has become a source of intimate knowledge of the still-water lakes and rivers of his home territory, Prince George and the surrounding area. His ability to capture large fish using chironomid, nymph, and dry fly patterns is legendary. His book will become living resource material for the Central Interior.

This book is a must-read for fly fishing BC's Central Interior, written by my friend and fishing buddy Brian Smith, who, during my four years of living in Prince George, has lured and guided me to most of the water he writes about...he knows his fishing, and the best places to do it.
